

How can Tramadol be your Savior during Menstrual Cramps?

Menstrual cramps are some things that are experienced every month, and they can be light to high pain. The intensity of pain can vary among individuals. However, in some cases, the cramps can be so severe that they can alter our daily life, and we just want to be in bed. Feeling low-intensity cramps is normal, but experiencing too much high pain during periods is not necessarily expected and may link to other health conditions.

Why do we experience cramps?

Every month, the uterus lining sheds down, which causes blood. However, the muscles go through various contractions to complete this. Due to this, we experience cramps.

Along with cramps, some may also experience:

- Nausea
- Vomiting
- Weakness
- Headaches
- Diarrhea
- Mood swings

Furthermore, the doctor may prescribe tramadol for menstrual cramps to treat this. If you are going through severe menstrual cramps or heavy flow, it can be a sign of other health conditions like endometriosis or an increase in uterus size. Consult your doctor for proper treatment, and do not consume any medication without a prescription.
