People need help, and at some point, we all find ourselves in a situation where we require assistance. If you're reading this, you've already taken a crucial step towards seeking help – acknowledging that you need it. Often, asking for help is challenging, but waiting too long can make it even harder to dig yourself out of a tough situation.

We often hear people say, "I'm okay for now, I can handle it," but this can only work for so long. Eventually, if you keep robbing Peter to pay Paul, you'll find yourself in a dire situation. I'd like to share my story with you to illustrate this point. On August 14th, 2014, I was in a motorcycle accident, left in a ditch for over 7 hours. Miraculously, someone returned to turn off my motorcycle's expensive Harley Davidson battery.

I sustained multiple injuries, including fractures to my face, skull, and neck, as well as a severed auditory nerve that left me deaf on one side. When I woke up, I knew life would be different, but I couldn't anticipate how challenging it would become.

1. I needed in-home assistance because I couldn't even lift my head off a pillow without help.
2. Short-term disability payments, which were already inadequate, covered only a fraction of my previous income.
3. Missing payments due to administrative errors added to my financial stress.
4. I was told I didn't qualify for assistance because I had made too much money in the previous year, even though I couldn't work and my family was struggling to put food on the table.
5. The stress and financial strain led to losing everything I had worked hard to attain, including my motorcycles, truck, and home.
6. I couldn't afford to send my son on a school trip, and that was something I deeply regret.

This experience was painful, especially coupled with my poor money management skills. I worked 60 hours a week to sustain a lifestyle I enjoyed. These events motivated me to start Community Pay it Forward to prevent others from going through similar hardships.

We aim to help families, kids, and community projects. While not everyone can offer financial assistance, many can provide other resources, such as cleaning, meals, or warm clothing during cold weather. We want to empower people to make every purchase count, supporting the community through everyday spending.

Our program is expanding, and we cater to various situations like yours. Your friends and interested individuals can become part of your support network. We understand your situation is serious, and we have different packages to help you raise awareness and support.

For nonprofits and charities, we want to give you the opportunity to tell your story and make it easy for people of all financial backgrounds to support your cause. We don't accept cash donations directly but will guide supporters to your donation portal.

The next steps involve a meeting to understand your goals and mission, followed by choosing a package. We're committed to a long-term partnership and will gradually reduce costs over time. We'll provide a badge and QR code to promote your campaign, but your friends, followers, and supporters will play a vital role in its success.

For start-ups, we know how challenging it can be to budget for necessary purchases when funds are limited. We offer you a platform to get your name out there while making an impact in the community.

You must join our giving family, directing sales to other Mission Partners to support the community. Our "Shop-Click-Pick" process involves sending people to our website, where they can choose from various Giving Partners to fulfill their shopping needs. Every purchase generates a referral award, and you'll receive a significant percentage of every referral received.
